INTRODUCTION

The Discharge Preparation Service is the bridge between emergency medical care and follow-up care. The provision of comprehensive medical care and community care resources is particularly important in assessing an individual's nursing concerns after discharge.

AIM

In response to the need for rehabilitation and the renovation of the home environment has not been completed, it can be transferred to a hospital in a chronic rehabilitation area to obtain the opportunity and time for functional rehabilitation.

CONCLUSIONS

Early discharge readiness services can avoid unnecessary hospitalization, reduce readmission rates, and can provide complete and continuous care to give back to the community and enhance the use of long-term care 2.0.

METHOD

Every patient is assessed upon admission and a discharge readiness plan is developed. Assess treatment prognosis, home environment constraints, financial affordability, assistance needs, social organization assistance resources.

RESULTS

Discharge preparation services connect with social resources, including long-term care 2.0 provision, application for assistive device resources, referral to long-term care institutions, home care, identification of the disabled, foreign-related nursing applications, rehabilitation buses, social welfare and medical resources.

For the care of discharged patients at home, the medical team will hold a cross-team discussion meeting with their families to discuss preparations before discharge.

The patient was discharged home and applied for the government's "Long-Term Care 2.0-Rehabilitation at Home". The hospital physical therapist and the family physical therapist discuss the patient's recovery during the hospital stay to continue the goals of home rehabilitation.

After the discharge preparation service personal manager assists the patient to return home, he can apply for "Government Long-term Care 2.0-Community Day Service Center", and the patient can continue to resume community activities, reducing the pressure of family members who cannot take care of them during the day.
