

The Prism Model identifies core functions of the arts and humanities within healthcare.

Take a picture to view journal website.

Intertwine: An Arts and Humanities Journal for UCSF Health Professional Students

Student Presenter: Michelle Bui

Faculty Advisor: Shieva Khayam-Bashi

University of California
San Francisco

Intertwine

ARTS & HUMANITIES JOURNAL

Call for submissions flyer art.

Aims

- We sought to create an interprofessional online journal, Intertwine, based on the Prism Model to chronicle the diverse narratives at our institution and build a sustainable platform for the arts and humanities in healthcare.

Timeline & Methods

- Mar 2023: Acquired project funding
- Jun – Sept 2023: Recruited editorial and advisory board
- Sept – Dec 2023: Met with board to strategize publication
- Jan – Mar 2024: Called for submissions across UCSF

Results

By May 2024, we expect to have reviewed and edited submitted pieces, launched our website, and celebrated our inaugural issue with an on-campus publication event.

intertwine

Home Archives Blog

UCSF's Arts & Humanities Journal

Initial draft for journal website.

Reflections

Through the recruitment and submission phases, we witnessed a strong passion for the arts and humanities across UCSF grounded in the tenets of the Prism Model. This process also revealed a key challenge in terms of sustainability: financial support, which reliably exists for other scholarly work. Faced with this barrier, our board continues to find creative ways to fund our efforts and not only sustain Intertwine, but the arts and humanities as a foundation to human health and wellbeing.

Acknowledgements: This project was made possible by a 2023 Innovations Funding for Education grant from the UCSF Academy of Medical Educators Innovations Funding Program.